Dear Chris,
Thank you for consulting on the above planning application.

The application is accompanied by a historic environment desk-based assessment, and I have also provided comments on part of the site in the context of the Woodville link road proposals.

Although the site contains records on the Derbyshire HER these relate to historic clay extraction, quarrying and post-medieval field boundaries, none of which are likely to have any meaningful archaeological significance. The site appears to have subject to substantial 20th century disturbance in the context of clay mining and opencast coal extraction, and I conclude on this basis that archaeological impacts are extremely unlikely.

Regards
